

Kim Spurgeon

Director of the Nevada Film Office

When you think about iconic films such as "Rain Man" and "The Misfits," Hollywood has long played a role in capturing the Nevada spirit on the silver screen. Television, film, and other video production also play a role in Nevada's economy.

Kim Spurgeon is the Director of the Nevada Film Office, a division of the Governor's Office of Economic Development, where she promotes the growth of the film industry in the state and advises senior leadership on industry-related policy. She also manages the state's film tax incentive program and monitors the trends of these programs both domestically and internationally.

The Nevada Film Office was established in 1982 as the Division of Motion Pictures and operates within the Governor's Office of Economic Development. The Nevada Film Office markets Nevada as a production destination for film, television, commercials, and other forms of audiovisual media to generate economic impact through job creation and in-state production spending. The office facilitates connections with local crew, vendors, and services, as well as identifies filming locations, assists with the permitting processes, and coordinates intergovernmental cooperation statewide. The Nevada Film Office also administers the Transferable Tax Credit for Film and Other Productions program to attract productions to film in the state and encourage growth of the industry in Nevada.

Prior to her current role, Kim worked as a production manager on commercials, feature films and television shows, including "Behind the Candelabra," "Now You See Me," and "Paul Blart: Mall Cop 2." During this time, she advanced her industry knowledge and built invaluable relationships with the crew members and vendors she now serves in her role at the Nevada Film Office. She earned a bachelor's degree in communications with a concentration in film from Elon University.

In 2023, Kim was presented with the "Get $##it Done" award by Governor Lombardo for her exceptional work in state service.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Over the past decade, we have witnessed Nevada's significant growth in innovative architecture, but also the remarkable surge in the growth of professional sports, technology, and the movie industry, cementing its status as a dynamic hub for entertainment and innovation. Yet, would it surprise you to know that Nevada has been involved in the movie industry for over a century? The state's involvement in film production dates back to the early 20th century. One of the earliest notable films shot in Nevada is "The Round-Up," directed by Cecil B. DeMille, which was filmed partially in Reno in 1919.

Nevada's prominence in the film industry grew significantly with the rise of Las Vegas as an entertainment capital in the mid-20th century. The city's vibrant nightlife, iconic casinos, and unique desert landscapes made it a popular location for filming movies, particularly those featuring themes of gambling, heists, and the glitz of Las Vegas.

Numerous famous films have been shot in Nevada over the years, including classics like "Ocean's Eleven" (1960), "Casino" (1995), and more recent hits like "The Hangover" (2009). Nevada has been the setting for many scenes in various genres, from dramas to comedies to action films. The state's diverse landscapes, including the Las Vegas Strip, the Mojave Desert, and Lake Tahoe, have provided filmmakers with a wide range of settings for their stories.

Nevada's movie industry has flourished, attracting filmmakers from around the world to its diverse landscapes and state-of-the-art production facilities. Las Vegas serves as a popular filming location for various movies, TV shows, and commercials due to its iconic landmarks, vibrant atmosphere, and favorable tax incentives for filmmakers.

Blockbuster movies, independent films, and television series have found a home in Nevada, contributing to its cultural vibrancy and generating substantial revenue for local businesses.

As Nevada continues to evolve as a magnet for sports, technology, and entertainment, the synergy between these industries promises to fuel further growth, create a more diverse and resilient economy, and establishing the state as a global leader in innovation and creativity.

By embracing innovation and fostering a business-friendly environment, the state continues to attract investment and create opportunities for economic growth in the years ahead.
